In each installment of Six Months On, we catch up with an Early Decision student from Duke Kunshan's inaugural undergraduate Class of 2022, to learn about what it's like to make such a big decision at a young age, and to find out about their experiences so far on campus.

This time, we talk to John Aniekan Lewis, 18, from Lagos, Nigeria.

Signing an ED agreement is a big step for a high school student. How did it feel at the time?

It was quite a scary decision, but at the same time it was a more adventurous decision because obviously I knew about the connection Duke Kunshan has with Duke and the idea of studying in China and getting an American-style education there was very exciting. And the opportunity to be a pioneer student in a new school was very exciting. Those kinds of things made the decision less scary and a bit easier.
